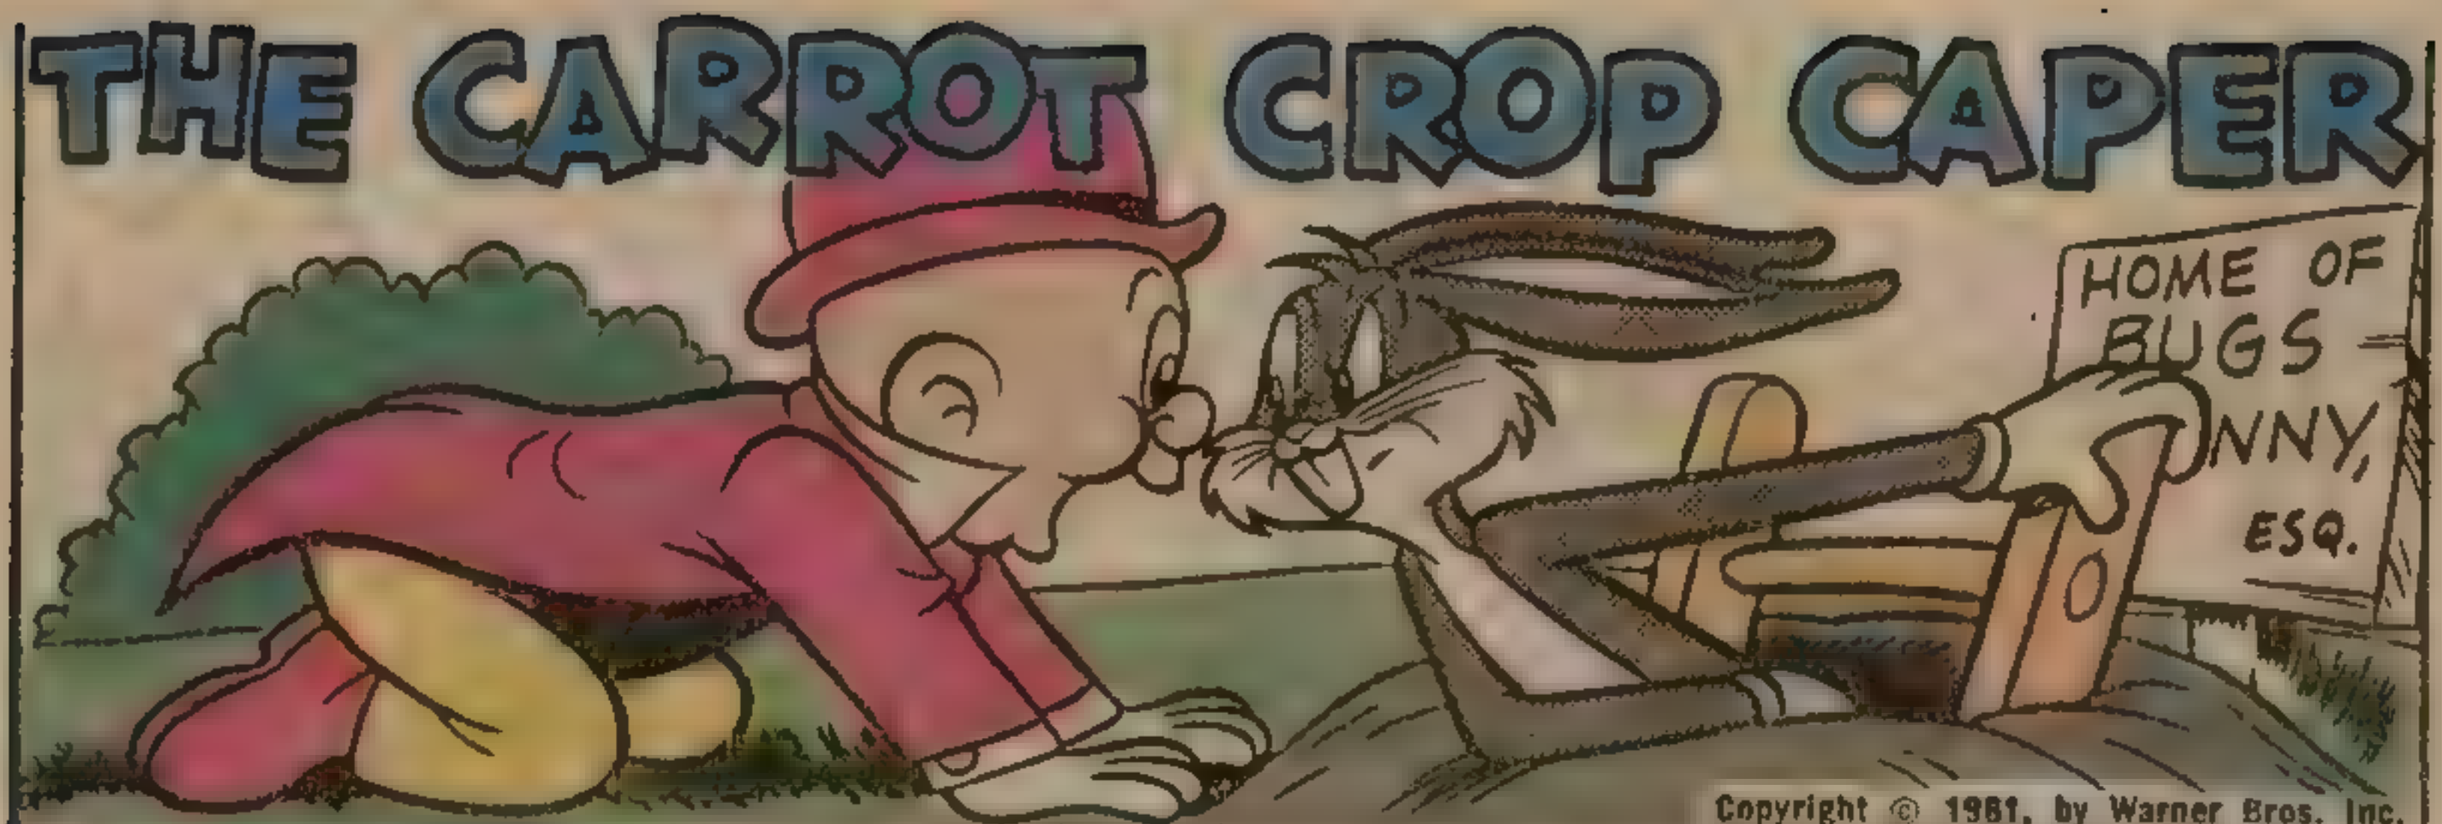
THE CARROT CROP CAPER



Copyright © 1961, by Warner Bros. Inc.

One crisp morning, at harvest time, Elmer Fudd knocked on the door of Bugs Bunny's hole home with an air of urgency.

"Heh-heh," he tittered to himself. "I've got the dwop on this wascally wabbit this year. Before he can twick me out of half of my cawwot cwop, like he did last year, I'll put my own plan to work."

"Er, what's up, Doc?" Bugs inquired, as he popped out of his hole. "Want some help harvesting your delicious carrots?"

"Oh, no," Elmer glowered. "I don't need your kind of help, Bugs Bunny."

"Oh, forget what happened last year," Bugs grinned. "That was just a misunderstanding. I offered to harvest your crop for 'a half,' only you thought I meant half a dollar when I meant half of the carrot crop. Come on, Doc, let me help you."

"I already have somebody harvesting the cwop," Elmer replied. "I just stopped by to see if you'd help me with my house cleaning. I'll pay you in cawwots."

"How many?" Bugs inquired suspiciously, as he glanced across the field where the harvester was loading baskets of yellow carrots onto a cart.

"Two," Elmer replied, trying to hide a twinkle in his eyes.

"Two?" Bugs blinked with surprise. "Did you say two, Doc?" he repeated, looking again at the baskets of carrots.

"That's wight, Pal. Two!" Elmer agreed.

"Well," Bugs grinned, secretly, "you do strike a hard bargain, but I'll do it for you, old friend!"

Elmer could hardly conceal his glee as they started for his house.

"It worked! It worked!" Elmer crowed to himself. "Bugs thinks I mean two baskets of cawwots, and he's wight! But that's cheap pay for the work he'll be doing for me. Besides, I'll be saving most of my cwop!"

When they arrived at Elmer's house, Bugs fell to work with a will. He scrubbed the floors, cleaned the walls, and washed the windows with such zeal that Elmer felt a twinge of conscience.

"G-Golly, Bugs," he exclaimed. "You've done such a good job, I think I'll pay you twice as much as I pwomised."

"Well, say, Doc, you're a real sport," Bugs replied with delight. "My work's all finished here, so I'll just go out and tell the workman to drop the carrots off at my place before he puts the cart away."

"All wight, Bugs," Elmer smiled, "and remember, twice two makes four!"

Elmer watched carefully as Bugs dashed up to the harvester, who had just finished reloading the cart. When Bugs held up four fingers to indicate his payment, the workman looked over at Elmer, who nodded to show he agreed with what Bugs was saying.

Elmer returned to his own work, and some time later, the harvester stopped by to report that his job was finished.

"Thanks," Elmer giggled. "I'm glad that I didn't give Bugs a chance to twick me this year. Just look how well he worked for me in the house . . . it's spotless. This time there's no misunderstanding. I paid him honestly for his work with those four baskets of cawwots you delivered to him."

"Golly, Mr. Fudd," the harvester gulped. "There sure has been a misunderstanding. Your plan has backfired on you. Bugs didn't think you meant four baskets of carrots . . . he thought you meant four cartloads! And, that's what I just delivered to him!"
